Nevertheless, they called for a new meeting at the same high level to be held in Bucnos Aires before the annual meeting in September of the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank in Washington. Argentina was designated as the temporary secretariat to prepare for the next meeting of the Latin American group.

Officials in Cartagena said that, by setting up the consultative echanism they had raised the debt to a political matter among themselves and established an instrument to do the same with the northern industrial nations. The Latin American countries insist that the debt is no longer a technical financial matter between each nation and its creditors.

They announced that they would act jointly through the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs. The final communiqué said that the Latin American representatives on the Development Assistance Com-mittee of the World Bank, which to the Latin American proposals. also meets in September, would propose the creation of a task force, including representatives of the industrial countries, to "analyze the foreign debt problem."

Dante Caputo, Argentina's foreign minister, said that the meeting had achieved a consensus on "what we Latin Americans think should be the basis for a negotiation" with the governments of the creditor ies on debt, trade and economic development.

The communique included a detailed list of "negotiating guide-lines" that should be applied to debt and trade negotiations. They included the following:

Knowledgeable diplomatic sources in EC capitals said that the proposal also hinges on willingness by the West German chancellor, Heimut Kohl, to agree to pay a substantially larger share of financ-ing the cutback in British pay-

There is considerable speculation that Mr. Kohl may ask support for a controversial plan to subsidize West German farmers to offset an agricultural reform reached at the last summit. The reform involves dismanting monetary compensa-tory amounts, or MCAs — a complex system of EC border taxes and subsidies.

Officials drafting the budget plan in Paris, Bonn and London were highly cautious in assessing the chances for success in resolving the British budget issue.

Britain's foreign secretary, Sir Geoffrey Howe, said Saturday that his government is looking for suc-cess at Fontainebleau, adding that a compromise on the budget issue is possible "if our partners are willing to reciprocate our flexibility."
Mr. Mitterrand is expected to be seeking to force summit attention on political and technological cooperation, including foreign policy and defense issues, even if the British budget issue is not resolved. Such a sidestepping of the British question has already been criticized by West German, Dutch and EC Commission officials.

Noting that the EC treaty foroids national subsidies that would distort competition, the EC Commission last Monday refused permission for West Germany to increase subsidies as compensation for the MCA reform.

House, Senate Agree on 'Down Payment' for U.S. Deficits

By Tom Redburn

WASHINGTON - House and Senate negotiators, weary after more than 21 hours of haggling have agreed on a three-year pack-age of about $50 billion in tax ineases and more than $11 billion in spending cuts.

The agreement reached Saturday is the keystone of the congressional promise to deliver an election-year "down payment" to reduce project-ed budget deficits.

The plan includes hundreds of complex provisions mostly affecting business and wealthy investors. The widest impact on individuals comes from increases in liquor taxes, the continuation of federal telephone taxes, and changes in Medi-care health insurance rules that will boost monthly premiums for the elderly and freeze Medicare payments to doctors for 15 months.

As part of the compromise ap-proved Saturday, bowever, the con-ferees rejected an effort to keep cigarette taxes from being cut in half next year.

They also turned back administration proposals to expand Indi-vidual Retirement Accounts for nonworking spouses and to establish "enterprise zones" to provide tax breaks to businesses that invest in depressed inner city and rural

In a major new tax break for investors, the negotiators voted to cut the long-term capital gains holding period from one year to six months. This will go into effect immediately and last through 1987, allowing investment gains held at least six months to be taxed at a maximum rate of 20 percent instead of 50 percent. The conference compromise will be voted on this week by the full House and Senate, and is expected has indicated be will sign the bill. However, differences between the two houses on defense spending are still unresolved and may not be settled before Congress begins a three-week recess at the end of this

The compromise package is likely to have much less effect on fu-ture budget deficits and interest rates than Congress and President Reagan anticipated earlier this year. Rising interest rates have boosted the cost of financing the $1.5 trillion federal debt and already eaten into much of the projected savings. Even with the package, deficits are expected to average about $200 billion a year over the next three years. The compromise is the product of more than two weeks of meetings, capped by marathon sessions designed to wear out resistance to compromise that bave become standard on Capitol Hill. After this ordeal, House and Senate leaders were in no mood to worry about whether or not their effort would achieve its goals.

"We've been through a long and torturous process," said Senator Robert Dole, Republican of Kansas, the chairman of the Finance Committee who was the chief Senate negotiator. "I really think we have a good tax bill."

The progress of the tax bill was closely followed by hundreds of lobbyists. The nearly 300 changes in the tax code were largely aimed at obscure provisions affecting narrow groups instead of imposing any major new levy.

The bill essentially sets a compromise in which House Demo-crats agreed to accept most of the spending reductions in Medicare and welfare proposed by the Senate Republicans in return for Senate agreement to drop many of the approximately $10 billion in tax breaks they originally wanted.

House Democrats did win a new program to provide health care for many poor pregnant women and their families who are excluded from Medicaid; they also got an expansion of the $500 tax credit for the working poor, Republicans in the Senate achieved a permanent waiver of billions of dollars in deferred corporate taxes for export

These are some of the decisions made behind closed doors early Saturday morning:

· Adding about 35 cents to the cost of an average fifth of liquor, effective Oct. 1, but dropping a proposal to set the cigarette tax at 12 cents a pack. The tax is now 16 cents a pack but is scheduled to drop to 8 cents on Sept. 30, 1985. Although he was not a member of the negotiating team, Senator Jesse Helms, Republican of North Carolina, warned he would filibuster the compromise bill if it did oot allow the cigarette tax to be reduced on

 Approval of a House plan to limit the use of tax-free industrial development bonds for private purposes by imposing a state-by-state annual volume cap of $150 per state resident. Small states will allowed to spend a minimum of $200 million a year despite the limitation, A "grandfather clause" ex-cludes dozens of current proposals from the limitation.

• Extending the use of tax-free mortgage bonds for four more years. The bill places a dollar limit on the bonds based on past use.

· A cut in the tax break for real estate investment. This was achieved by stretching out depreci-ation deductions from the current 15 years to 18 years. The change is

 An increase of six cents a gal-lon in the federal tax on truck diesel fuel, raising it to 15 cents per gallon for at least four years. The tax increase would be largely offset for truckers by a decrease in highway taxes for beavy trucks.

10.000 Vietnamese Leave Cambodia

BAVIT, Cambodia (UPI) — Thousands of Vietnamese soldiers pulled out of Cambodia Saturday in a carefully staged withdrawal to show progress in the lengthy war against anti-Hanoi guerrillas.

Sources in the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh said three Vietnam-

The defeated Khmer Rouge, backed by China, make up the majority of the 50,000 guerrillas battling Vietnamese and Cambodian government forces. However, Western military analysts believe the Cambodian resistance movement has been gaining strength and that many of the Vietnamese troops previously withdrawn have quietly been replaced.

Havana Agrees to Talks With U.S., After Election, on Flow of Cubans

By Bernard Gwertzman

New York Times Service WASHINGTON - Cuba has agreed to a long-standing U.S. proposal to open negotiations for normalizing the flow of Cubans between the two countries, according to State Department officials. They said Cuba wanted to start the talks only after the U.S. elections in No-

The United States bad asked for an earlier start. Cuba's insistence on waiting met a mixed reaction Saturday from senior officials, who were evidently unhappy with the apparent effort to time the talks in connection with the elections.

A State Department official said that although the agreement was a positive development, the United States would examine the situation before setting a firm date.

The officials, in disclosing the previously unpublicized exchanges, said Cuba's stand was consistent with an apparent policy decision not to do anything that might seem to contribute to President Ronald Reagan's re-election.

The United States has been pressing Cuba intermittently for four years to take back the few thousand criminals and mental patients among the 125,000 refugees who came by bost to Florida in and seriously about more active 1980 from the port of Mariel.

Kennedy Reportedly Will Endorse Mondale's Presidential Bid Today

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches NORTH OAKS, Minnesota — Senator Edward M., Kennedy will endorse Walter F. Mondale for the 1984 Democratic presidential nomination on Monday, according to Mondale campaign sources.

The Massachusetts Democrat was to meet Sunday with Mr. Mondale; the party's likely nominee, and spend the night at the candidate's suburban St. Paul home. Aides to both men said the senator would not take part in one of the interviews that Mr. Mondale has been conducting with possible running mates

The visit will represent a political rapprochement between two Democratic camps.

Four years ago, when Senator Kennedy challenged President Jim-my Carter for the 1980 Democratic nomination, Mr. Mondale said in a sommation, Mr. Mondale said in a speech in lows that the senator had "decided to pursue the politics of the moment" in opposing Mr. Car-ter's embargo on grain sales to the Soviet Union. Mr. Kennedy ac-cused Mr. Mondale, Mr. Carter's vice presidents of questions his vice president, of questioning his

The two also found themselves on uncomfortable terms early this spring. In the view of Mondale strategists, Senator Kennedy and his followers were too quick to draw away from Mr. Mondale after his losses in the presidential primaries in New Hampshire and Maine. On Saturday, Mr. Mondale interviewed two prospective running mates, Senator Lloyd Bentsen of Texas and Mayor Dianne Feinstein

Reporters peppered Senator Bentsen with questions about his philosophical differences with Mr. Mondale and Mayor Feinstein about her lack of experience in areas such as foreign affairs. ments, addressed both issues.

He acknowledged that Mr. Bent-sen, 63, has taken more conservative positions on several major issnes than has Mr. Mondale. The Texan voted for President Ronald Reagan's budget and tax cuts, and he supports the B-1 bomber and production of nerve gas. He also oted for confirmation of James G. Watt as secretary of interior. But Mr. Mondale said his search for a running mate was not a quest for "a homogenized ticket." "I am not asking that running mate of mine have identical views in order to qualify," he said.

Later after meeting with Mrs. Feinstein, Mr. Mondale said that women and minorities should not be held back from the vice presidency simply because they do not inefficiency? "Mean was ar 254" such as foreign policy.

■ Jackson to Meet Castro The Rev. Jesse L. Jackson arrived Saturday in Panama on the first leg of a six-day Latin American tip, news agencies reported from Panama City.

Mr. Jackson also plans to visit El Salvador, Cuba and Nicaragua.

A prominent source in the Jackson campaign told The New York Times that President Fidel Castro of Cuba had agreed to release some political prisoners when Mr. Jackson visits Cuba this week. The source said the action was intended as a goodwill gesture. He said Mr. Jackson was attempting to determine how the freed prisoners could be transported to the United States, although he said he did not know how many would be involved. In a visit to Syria last year, Mr.

Mr. Jackson, at an airport news conference in Panama Saturday. said he would carry into Cuba a list of prisoners and would appeal for their release. A Jacksoo aide said there were 21 names on the list, Mr. Jackson is scheduled to hold a private meeting with Mr. Castro for several hours Monday night.

Mr. Jackson, soon after his arrival in Panama, became embroiled in the country's politics when sup-porters of Armulfo Arias Madrid, the defeated candidate in last mooth's presidential elections, picketed the building where Mr. Jackson met for nearly an hour with President-elect Nicolas Ardito

The demonstrators, who accused Mr. Ardito Barletta of vote fraud, also picketed Mr. Jackson's hotel and disrupted a Roman Catholic service where the black minister spoke. Mr. Jackson agreed to meet this week with the demonstrators. ■ Hispanics Urge Abstention

The nation's largest Hispanic or-ganization has urged delegates to the Democratic National Convention to refrain from casting votes on the first commating ballot, The Associated Press reported from El Paso, Texas. Mario Obledo, president of the League of United Latin American Citizens said Saturday that a boycott would signal to Democratic candidates that they have ignored Hispanic issues. The group has more than 100,000 members.

Mr. Obledo said he wanted to secure an "immediate commitment" from Mr. Mondale and Senator Gary Hart of Colorado either to ensure the defeat of the immigration reform bill passed last week by the House or to ensure an alternative measure that included amnesty for undocumented aliens "without any conditions."

The clear target of the proposed protest is Mr. Mondale, who is supported by the vast majority of the 291 Hispanic convention delegates, even though his failure to work behind the scenes to defeat the immigration measure has angered some Hispanics.

The proposal also may affect the future of the bill, which passed the House by only five votes and must return there for another vote after a House-Senate conference.

Although the first-ballot protest was discussed with Mr. Jackson, who spoke to the group before starting his Latin America tour, Mr. Obledo said the idea originated with LULAC leaders, Mr. Jackson did oot make clear whether he supported it, although he told convennon delegates earlier to vote their consciences on the first ballot.

The Rev. Jesse L. Jackson talked with President Jorge E. Illueca of Panama Saturday at the presidential palace on the first stop of Mr. Jackson's tour of Latin America.

In the final drafting session here Saturday, the committee defeated an attempt by supporters of the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson to put the party on record as favoring the mination of the runoff primaries used in 10 states.

Then, at the urging of delegates backing Walter F. Mondale for the presidential nomination, the com-mittee called for a study of all discriminatory barriers to voting, to be carried out by the Democratic National Committee and the Justice Department in an incoming Democratic administration.

The Debts That Bind

It now seems possible that Argentina will not pay the $350 million due its creditors before the end of this week. Will this default finally set off the global debt bomb? Probably not. American banks among the creditors may have to write down their profits or invent a new contrivance to postpone the day of reckoning. But in any case, the fundamental problem will persist.

Argentina's new government, desperately trying to build genuine democracy, pleads it cannot make painful economic adjustments as fast as is wanted by the bankers and the International Monetary Fund. Tn avoid public unrest, the government led by President Raul Alfonsin says wages must rise 6 percent to 8 reent faster than the feverisb inflation, now higher than 500 percent a year. Argentina stands defiant; and the financial world is treated to yet another nerve-racking

Still, the two sides need each other and show signs of understanding that. At their London summit meeting two weeks ago, the industrial democracies pledged more aid for developing countries on more generous terms. Also, the banks bave agreed to discuss easier terms for Mexico and Brazil, the biggest debtors, as a "reward" for economic progress already made.

And new federal regulations require American banks, in their earnings reports, to face up more honestly to defaults.

Argentina, in turn, last week softened its intransigence hy making an interest payment that had been due in January. And 11 Latin debtors at their own summit meeting in Colombia issued a non-threatening plea for understanding, to be pressed by a joint consultative group, and backed by promises to pay their debts.

Assuming that this quarter's crisis is resolved by yet another compromise, it has again illuminated the huge dimensions of the debt problem. The Third World's massive foreign debt will not be repaid for many years, if ever. The way to get the largest portion of it repaid is through sustained economic growth that lets the debtors earn their way back to solvency. That is already happening in some countries, but the staying power of the current economic expansion is uncertain.

The economic facts of life will force the debtor nations to take poliocally difficult steps. The creditors, too, need to take some. Above all, they need to restrain rising interest rates, which only make matters worse. Capping the rates for poor nations and adding the excess to the end of their loans could relieve some of the burden. Or a special IMF account could be created, from which debtors could draw when interest costs exceed a certain level. Stretching repayment schedules would also belp. Just as urgently, the developing countries need markets for exports. The industrial nations simply have to resist protectionist barriers against them.

Finally, the austerity measures proposed for debtors have to be custom designed. Argentina's democracy cannot take as much pressure as Mexico's. The debt bomb has been ticking for two years while both debtors and creditors bave made a lot of adjustments. Disaster will be averted if one principle is observed: The debtors need to earn their way out of bock and therefore need time and opportunities to earn.

Mitterrand in Moscow

President François Mitterrand of France mendoned the unmentionable in Moscow by raising the matter of Andrei Sakharov during a visit. His hosts rehulfed him, as he knew they would. To every inquiry about the dissenting physicist and his ailing wife, Yelena Bonner. the Soviet response has been like Konstantin Chernenko's this time: "We shall not allow anyone to interfere in our internal affairs,"

But Mr. Mitterrand had to speak out. He has criocized his precedessor for rushing to meet with Leonid Brezhnev shortly after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, Europeans across the political spectrum are outraged by the Russians' refusal to give a decent exit to the banished Sakharovs, advocates only of greater liberty. What Moscow dismisses as an internal matter is in fact an obstacle to productive diplomacy. If Mr. Mitterrand's trip finally makes that point, it could promote his larger purpose of stimulating nuclear negotiations.

It is no accident, as the Russians say, that Mr. Chernenko claims the same imperious prerogative as the fendal czars. Indeed, Nicholas II used almost the same language in rejecting Western inquiries about mistreatment of Jews and other minorities.

In 1903, thousands of Americans petitioned through their government against a particularly frightful pogrom in Kishinev. As Thomas Bailey's history recounts, the Russian foreign minister refused to receive the document, saying: "The emperor, whose will was the sole law of the land, needed no information from the outside world as to conditions within his domain or advice as to how he should manage his internal affairs."

Though the argument is the same, the world is not. The czar's tyranny never claimed to guarantee human rights. And Nicholas II, un-like Mr. Brezhnev in 1975, had signed no Helsinki accords that made the signatories accountable to each other for the condition of human rights. This pertinent fact was recalled hy Mr. Mitterrand, whose Socialist government includes some Communist ministers. Indeed. Georges Marchais, France's Communist leader, said his party would "hreak" with Moscow if anything dire happened to the Sakharovs. The Soviet press, of course, reported none of this. It found room only for Mr. Chernenko's fatuous comparison of Soviet benefits with Western poverty and unemployment.

That, 100, has precedent. When challenged about those pogroms, Mr. Bailey writes, the Russian press scornfully reminded the United States of its ill-treatment of Negroes.

Plain Speaking in Moscow

President Mitterrand's decision to speak out firmly and unequivocally, while supping in the Kremlin, on the subject of liberty, human rights and, more particularly. Andrei Sakharov and his wife, does him great credit.

The French president is the first Western leader to hold substantove talks with Mr. Chernenko and the visit has perfectly illustrated just how hard it is to conduct a dialogue with the Kremlin. It remains to be seen whether he has managed to ease the situation of the Sakharovs, two gentle and selfless souls whose internal exile, and KGB harassment, is the punishment for speaking out for justice, peace and compassion. But by not pulling his punch-es, Mr. Mitterrand has reminded the Soviet leadership that its treatment of the Sakharovs, and others like them, is a test of credibility. - The Daily Telegraph (London).

Tough Message for NATO

Once again a few beastly American senators have dared to suggest a drawdown of U.S. forces in Europe unless our affies meet their modest pledges to NATO and start building a credible conventional defense. And once again, the political-military establishments on both sides of the Atlantic have rallied their forces to beat back this terrible heresy. The arguments for and against are hoary with age; the outcome is as predictable as a tribal ritual. But will this oft-told tale always have the same ending? Can NATO persist indefinitely to support an irrational defense strategy? Is refuge always to be sought in the status quo because governments are too intimidated and immobilized to reform the Alliance?

If the latest Senate challenge had come from the neo-isolationists who infest the chamber, it could be dismissed. But when a man of Sena-tor Sam Num's credentials leads the charge, everyone genuinely dedicated to a strong At-lantie Alliance ought to pay attention. For what Mr. Nunn embodied in his defeated amendment teflects the Warnings about NATO from Henry Kissinger and others who are tough-minded about the Soviet threat.

Mr. Nunn's proposal was simple: Withdraw 90,000 of the 325,000 U.S. troops in Europe by 1990 if Western European countries continue to fall below their pledge for a real 3 percent annual growth in their military budgets. The Alliance must move into a era of reform and rethinking if it is to remain a vital, credible organization for the defense of democratie nations. While the Nunn amendment deserved rejection, its rationale deserves respect.

Nunn's Run at NATO: A Warning to Europe

By Stephen S. Rosenfeld

WASHINGTON — Just 10 years (not extravagant) commitment to put up its share of a credible convention-ai defense. heavyweight by sidetracking the Mansfield Amendment's call for uni-lateral cuts of American forces in Europe. Last week the Georgia Democrat put in his own. superficially similar amendment. It could be the foreign policy event of the decade. The reason is that Mr. Nunn, by his nlace in a changing spectrum and by his personal stature, is the single person in a position to make happen the major revision of NATO strategy that others have only talked about, without results, all these years.

True, it is not going to happen at this precise moment. The Senate rejected the Nunn Amendment last Wednesday. But time, his purposefulness and the momentum of events seem to be clearly on his side. Mr. Nunn is forcing three basie tests nn Europe:

• Whether it will make the extra

ALLIANCE Whether it will thereby raise the point at which NATO, in the event that its conventional forces were being overrun, would have to choose between caving in or going nuclear.

• Whether it will put its relationship with the United States on a more solid basis in which Europe accepts a defense responsibility in keeping erwise a fading into lofty appeals to togetherness or into impossibly grand architectural designs.

Mr. Nunn's contribution to this confused scene is to provide a place where this latter-day Archimedes can stand while be moves an awfully im-portant piece of the Atlantic world. Shape up in conventional defense, he says to the Europeans: Meet the agreed 3-percent annual defense hikes or increase munition stockpiles and prepare facilities for quick U.S. reinforcements, as long promised. Or, says Mr. Num, after a two years, the United States will start shipping out up to 30,000 troops a year for three years, reducing our strength to 236,000 — still a perfectly good "trip-wire" to ensure our involvement in a Soviet attack.

The "burden-sharing" part of Mr.

Nunn's case tends to get the blood boiling. The United States is surpass-ing NATO targets, the allies drag far behind. The allies have built none of the shelters and only 20 percent of the other facilities needed for the 1,500 extra planes America would send if the bell rang. The United States is spending $52 billion over the next five years for spare munitions; the allies are doing bitle or nothing. Still, the more fundamental argument is strategic. If Moscow at-tacked, NATO could fight only for "days, not weeks" before going nu-clear, says the NATO commander, General Bernard Rogers — hardly the credible deterrent that Europe craves. So for $90 billion a year (30 percent of the military budget).

America is buying a NATO strategy at least trim our own costs.

It is the wrong time, he was told. the Europeans and cheer the Rusintends to stay the course.

Mr. Nunn sees a terrible disparity between our exposure and our securi-ty and he has a fair, hardheaded way to try to close a good part of the gap. The Europeans are fluttering. They should see the immense advantage to them of having the American handle on NATO be grasped by a conserva-tive such as Mr. Nunn, who believes in a strong defense and in the Atlan-tic Alliance, too.

He recoils from the suggestion that he has taken the Mansfield isolationist approach of unilateral withdrawal: "His goal was to get us out. Mine is to keep us in" — by furnishing the Western Europeans with a sharper incentive for self-help and, specifically, by offering a program that raises the nuclear threshold and thus lets European politicians satisfy their publics' passion against the very idea of nuclear war.

Mondale's Choice for 'The Most Insignificant Office'

By James Reston

WASHINGTON — Walter Mondale, abead on delegates but 15 points behind President Ronald Reagan in the popularity polls, is now looking over the Dem-ocratic field for a vice-presidential candidate who might help him win the election in November. Should be go with Gary Hart, as Mr. Reagan went with George Bush in 1980, in the hope of uniting the Or with the person he thinks best qualified to be president, in case of accident, as Jimmy Carter chose Mr. Mondale himself in 1980? What Mr. Mondale does about this - selecting the best presidentin-waiting or the best vote-getter to help him in November — will prob-ably tell us more about Mr. Mondale than about his running-mate.

There is a view that the vice presidential nominee makes little if any difference, especially this year, since Mr. Mondale seems to be so far behind. Theodore White remarked recently, not entirely in jest, the only woman who could help Fritz on the ticket would be Florence Nightingale or Joan of Arc. Even so, Mr. Mondale's choice of a vice-presidential nomince will be the first indication of the quality of the people he would want in his administration if he won. And considering the disappointing record of Mr. Reagan's appointments to the cabinet, White House staff and embassies, Mr. Mondale's decisions in this period of rest and reflection, about where he is going and who is going with him, could be important. We all know the old historic and music-hall jokes about the vice presidency, and even now they aree vaguely amusing. Franklin Roosevelt picked John Nance Garner as his vice president, hoping to assure the electron water of Tevas and the electoral votes of Texas, and after eight years in that office, Mr. Garner concluded that the job was not "worth a pitcher of warm spit."

In more elegant terms, John Ad-ams, our first vice president, wrote that "my country has in its wisdom contrived for me the most insignificant office that ever the invention of man contrived"
Yet as Martin Wattenberg receptly reminded us, in an article in Public Opinion, nine vice presidents have had to assume the daunting responsibilities of the presidency upon the death or resignation of their skippers. They served 26 years as president, and four of them were then elected for four more years in the Oval Office.

In recent years, these facts have gradually changed the role of the vice presidency. Franklin Roosevelt shunned Harry Truman. Dwight Ei-senhower tolerated Richard Nixon but just barely. Lyndon Johnson intimidated Habert Humphrey and everybody else who doubted his conduct of the Vietnam war.

But there has been a switch. Mr. Carter brought Mr. Mondale into the center of executive decisions, and Mr. Reagan not only foreave and Mr. Reagan not only forgave Mr. Bush's opposition in the 1980 campaign, but has used him asa trusted member of his cabinet. As a result, Mr. Reagan, now 74 and the oldest president in the his-tory of the Republic, has dealt with the vice-presidential question with the utmost care. And Mr. Bush, who has served in the Congress, as head of the Central Intelligence Agency, as ambassador to the United Nations and to China, has not only been involved in the major decisions of the Reagan administration, but has had the good judgment to be invisible in the process.

Now it is Mr. Mondale's turn lo choose, not only a vice-presidential nominee, but a shadow cabinel to run against Mr. Reagan, and also House staff, dominated by the president's California friends. This may be Mr. Mondale's best chance.

There is little evidence so far, however, that Mr. Mondale has put his mind to the problem of ideas for the future or people who could help him define them. It is not that he tacks resources. He has in the universities and elsewhere a great num-ber of talented supporters, who are troubled about Mr. Reagan's deficits at home and particularly by his blundering abroad. But Mr. Mondale has not recruited them and has yet to make a speech about the future anybody here remembers.

Party presidential candidates he has already defeated — Messrs. Hart,

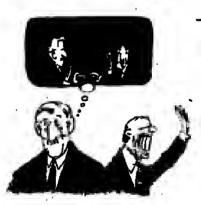

Jackson, Glenn, Cranston, Hollings, McGovern, and Askew—not to mention such others as Senators Bentsen of Texas and Bumpers of Arkansas, among others, Mr. Mondale already has the makings of a cabinet that could match Mr. Rea-gan's buddy boys, which is not say-ing much. But Mr. Mondale is not bringing them together. He is saying he has won but he is still talking about delegates instead of ideas, about the convention instead of the election. His choice of a vice-presidential nominee will be the first test of his judgment, but even that will not tell us whether he shadow cabinet that can demonstrate that in November the people will be choosing not merely a man but an organization that looks better than Reagan's California pickup team now running the White House and major departments.

The Short and Tall of Vice Presidents

WALTHAM. Massachusetts — In choosing a running mate, there are basically two ways a presidential nominee can go — the tall way and the short way. You select someone who is either taller — or shorter - than you are. For a nominee to underestimate the importance of this decision would be the height of folly. My own feeling is that Walter Mondale would be wise to pull together a short list.

The conventional wisdom is that a candidate should pick a taller running mate. We expect more of tall people than of small people — and in politics, as in much of life, expectations count for almost everything. Since World War II, nearly every successful candidate but one has taken the tall route. The one exception was Lyndon Johnson, who would not tolerate running with anyone bigger than he was. Harry Truman, Dwight Eisenhower, John Kennedy, Richard Nixon, Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan - all average-sized or tall men - chose running mates who were taller. The short route, on the other hand, has had little success. George McGovern chose a running mate who was smaller than he was (Thomas Eagleton) but then had to drop him when be fell short for other reasons. In 1964, Barry Gold-water short-circuited his chance for the presidency by choosing a running mate who was 5 feet 8 inches and whose name no one could re-member (William Miller). The obvious way for Mr. Mon-dale, at 5 feet 11 inches, to boost his ticket would be to offer the second spot to Gary Hart. There is a ques-tion of Mr. Hart's height change, however. He is listed in older biog-raphies as a 6-footer but now claims to be 6 feet 1½ inches. If choosing Mr. Hart proved to be a tall order for Mr. Mondale, 6-foot Dale Bumpers, 6-foot-2-inch Lloyd Bentsen, and 6-foot-5-inch Bill Bradley are towering in the wings.

But for all the tall talent, the short rouse has its own special appeal. Similarity is the key to attraction and, face it, most Americans are not all that tall. The average man is 5 feet 9 inches and the average wom-an is 5 feet 31/2 inches. While we like to look up to our leaders, we also the bold stroke that would send bordes of medium-sized people scurrying to the polls.

If Mr. Mondale were to choose someone shorter than himself as his running mate, he would risk losing the votes of tall people. He would have to write off tall states like Texas and tall occupational groups like fashion models.

Short vice presidential possibilities are, needless to say, in short supply. Until this year, people shorter than 5 feet 11 inches were never even mentioned as eligible running mates. But if Mr. Mondale dares take the plunge, he should consider Governor Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts at 5 feet 8½. Senator Daniel Inouye at 5 feet 6 inches. inches, Representative Corinne Boggs at 5 feet 5 inches, Representative Geraldine Ferraro at 5 feet 4 inches, Houston's Mayor Kathy Whitmire at 5 feet and Representative Barbara Mikulski at 4 feet 11½. To overlook these prospects would be — well, short-sighted.

The writer, a professor of psychology at Brandeis University, is more or less as tall as Walter F. Mondole. He

A Change Of Name but Not History

By Flora Lewis

VOLGOGRAD, U.S.S.R. — Pres-vident François Mitterrand of France chose this officially designated "hero city" as the last stop on his Soviet visit in remembrance of the wartime East-West ultiance. This key transport and agricultural center was Stalingrad, site of the murderous five-month battle that was the turning point of World War II on the Eastern Front, leaving the city 85 percent destroyed. The name was changed in 1961, five years after Nikita Khrushchev's de-Stalinization speech, but the battle remains in history as the Soviet Union's great victory of Stalingrad.

That was the city's second name, changed from Tsaritsyn by Stalin in 1925 after Lenin's death. The symbolism is thicker than battle smoke. The names and the vast tragedies they evoke reflect at once how much has changed in this huge country, the memories that block hadly needed further change with fear, and the deep continuity that underlies the nation's outlook

There are always many tiers to issues here. The habit of secrecy covers layer upon layer of opaque contradictions. A Soviet commentator, clearly disappointed by the refusal of the disappointed by the refusal of the new leadership to risk more than minor reform, told me in an attempt at justification that, after all, "so much has changed already that we have to seek continuity. It's safer."

All this has a direct impact on rough Soviet-American relations. President Reagan, who abruptly switched his approach at the start of the year with new offers to deal with Moscow, has taken Soviet rejection to mean the bear "is hibernating." He is probably out of date. There was a period of sheer paralysis while the late Yuri Andropov was dying and the new leader, Konstantin Cher-nenko, was establishing his position. But there is no longer much reason to think that Moscow is just waiting out the American elections or casting around for some better ideas on how to launch the next stage of policy.

The hard line and the hunkering down is the new policy. It means great Soviet-American tension is like-ly to last as long as the visibly ill Mr. Chernenko, or anyway until the next Soviet Communist Party congress in 1986, or unless something dramatic and unexpected happens. The reasons are essentially internal. Some big change in the world situation or a profound switch in American policy far beyond anything probable even from a Democratic administration could make a difference. Short of that, the Russians are likely to be stuck on the fork of the road marked deep freeze.

All the foreign visitors who have dealt with him recently have the impression that Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko is in charge of foreign policy for the first time in his life. He has been in his current job for 25 counterparts. He has been a Soviet diplomat for 45 years. He is the man Khrushchev said would sit on a block of ice until it melted if he were so ordered. But now, he is 75 and he has achieved in fact the power he held so long only in name. He evidently relishes it, but with a sour old man's pleasure at getting his way too late. Unlike the rest of the Politburo. Mr. Gromyko cannot be accused of lacking first-hand knowledge of the outside world and of America's vagaries. Nonetheless, he seems to share the dark misunderstandings of American and Western reactions that have recently led the Kremlin to hand propaganda victories to Washington.

The Russians are now on a Cassandra course, relentlessly warning their people there is a danger of war and tightening the reins. The biggest question is whether this is just the leaders' ploy to excuse themselves from facing up to their domestic problems, or whether they believe it. Quite possibly, both.
Of course, the Soviet Union cannot go on this way indefinitely. Sooner or later, it must seek a new accommoda-tion with the United States and move to modernize its economic system. There is evidence that some people within the leadership are pressing to start sooner, arguing that it is better to get on with the inevitable. But for now, there has been a decision not to try anything bold on the domestic front and to wait for the results of cautious, very limited experiments in decentralization.

There is a deep sense of uncer-tainty, of loss of direction. In the circumstances, no initiatives in for-eign policy are likely. It is a glum prospect in an age when technology is racing ahead of politics and crisis can erupt beyond control. But there it is. Better not to have illusions and seek to limit the damage.

Solution to the Deficit

Regarding "U.S. Excuses for Bud-get Deficit Proliferate" (June 11): Steven Weisman provides some political and politically expedient explanations by President Reagan and his entourage for the much-maligned U.S. budget deficit. However, his London economic summit partners, including Japan, and their constituencies must be told, frankly and publicly, that there are important causes missing from that list and that correction of them rests in their hands. Japan should assume a proper worldwide role appropriate to its success during the nearly 40 years of generous assistance and support it received in recovering from its demise in 1945. It is time for it to stop hedging over its just share of defense costs in the Pacific. Western Europe should cease

Continued refusal to accept these facts will provoke a political confrontation between the United States and the principal Latin American debtors.

Combined with Central American conflicts, this could absorb America's energies in the Western Hemisphere, impairing U.S. tradi-tional ties to Western Europe and important relationships in Asia. And it could undermine the bonds with Latin America which historically have been the most consistent theme of U.S. foreign policy.

A few statistics illustrate the mitude of the problem. At the end of 1983, the major Latin American debtors — Brazil, Mexico, Argentina, Venezuela, Chile, Peru and Colombia — owed more than $300 billion. Interest payments alone consumed more than 40 percent of all their export revenues; total debt service, even when repayment of capital was considerably stretched out, or "rescheduled" in technical language, equaled around 60 per-cent of earnings.

These figures will deteriorate further in the years to come. Every percentage point of U.S. interest rates costs the Latin American countries almost $3 billion. Interest payments, already difficult to sustain, have thus been further bloated by the recent increase in U.S. rates. Nor will the export earnings of debtors grow fast enough in the coming years to ease the debt burden significantly. Several recent America has reduced its imports, dertaken by countries unable to studies have demonstrated that mostly from the United States, by pay their own international debt? sustained growth.

Several eminent Latin Americans have proposed that the debt problem be "politicized." The term lacks precision but it reflects an important truth. The stakes have become too high to be left to the technical remedies of financial experts. Politicizing should not mean the removal of banks from the process. Politicizing does mean creating an international framework reflecting a realistic schedule for debt payments and above all, a reciprocal commitment to renewed growth

Only with such an approach will debtor countries be able to ask their people for sacrifices which are now unacceptable when seen as a device by banks to exact interest

The stakes are nothing less than the nature of the relationship of developed to developing countries and, for Americans, the vitality of U.S. ties in the Western Hemisphere at a moment when Latin America has the best and most democratic set of governments in this century. In an interdependent world, creditors and debtors will ruin each other by tests of strength. In truth, the only realistic question is whether we strike out together on new paths. For if we do not work together now to avoid a catastrophe, we will be forced into much greater efforts later in order to

Expectations High, Problems Hard As Carrington Assumes NATO Post

BRUSSELS — Britain's Lord Carrington takes over Monday as secretary-general of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization amid great expectations, but with no shortage of intractable problems.

After 13 years in the stewardship of Joseph Luns, who even to many NATO officials seemed to lose touch in later years with the chang-

The 65-year-old former British foreign and defense secretary starts the job at what for most people is retirement age. He brings a reputa-tion as a skilled negotiator and a persuasive advocate of less emhittered East-West relations.

Bot his aristocratic charm and dry wit may be sorely tried as chief executive of an alliance suffering from trans-Atlantic tensions, inadequate conventional forces and shortages of cash and manpower "In terms of public relations, he will certainly be able to achieve very major results," another official said. But in terms of the intractable issues of substance, the gentina's seizure of the Falkland Islands. His reputation as foreign secretary chiefly rests on his 1979 achievement of an independence settlement for Zimbabwe.

He arrives at NATO as relations between the United States and the Soviet Unioo are at a low ebb. In a major lecture on East-West relations last year, which in hindsight reads like a manifesto for the Atlantic alliance, he opposed ideological "megaphone diplomacy" and said the West lacked a positive strategy toward the Soviet Union.

He also faces serious challenges in "West-West relations" - the management of differences be-expectations may be too high.

Lord Carrington is known to fagradual withdrawal of U.S. troops

Lord Carrington is known to fa-vor strengthening the European side of NATO through greater defense cooperation, but is also aware of the budgetary constraints facing European governments.

Officials hope he will try to bridge what the U.S. ambassador to NATO, David M. Abshire, has called the "disconnect" between the political and military wings of The cleavage is reflected both in public skepticism of what NATO military leaders say about the "Soviet threat" and in the unpopularity of defense spending in many West European countries.

"I think Carrington will try to make the generals more responsive to political reality. He will also emphasize the need for more conventional defense efforts to make us less reliant on our ouclear crutches," a senior NATO official said.

Mr. Luns saw NATO through a period of severe Soviet and domestic pressure over the deployment of new U.S. medium-range ouclear missiles in Western Europe beginnine last autumn

Now that the Netherlands has conditionally accepted eventual deployment of its quote of cruise missiles, albeit delayed, many NATO officials think the anti-ouclear groups that have challenged alliance policy will gradually subside. Deployment has begun in Britain, Italy and West Germany and eems certain next year in Belgium. Conventional defense improvements and the battlefield use of high technology may prove as divi-sive for NATO as ouclear deterrence, since they require major spending and raise problems of technology-sharing and the lopsid-ed trans-Atlantic arms trade.

West Germany and the United States, the two main contributors, are currently at loggerheads over increasing NATO's common fund for improving air bases, munitions dumps, ports and fuel pipelines. Washington wants an infrastructure fund about two-thirds larger than Bonn is prepared to finance.

West European officials said they hoped Lord Carrington would focus allied effort on developing practical, affordable weapons rather than some of the more futuristic systems that NATO's military commanders are seeking to strike moving targets in Eastern Europe.

"We're hoping Carrington will inject a large dose of common sense above all, both on defense ques-tions and on the broader policial issues in NATO," one official said. But officials also warn against overestimating the power of the secretary-general, noting that he has to operate within a consensus of allies as divergent as the United

Gandhi's Televised Visit to Amritsar Is Seen as Bid to Mollify Angry Sikhs

Heart Is Found to Make Hormone-Like Material

Scientists Expect Find Will Improve Treatment for High Blood Pressure

By Harold M. Schmeck Jr. New York Times Service

NEW YORK — The heart, long thought to be little more than a muscle that pumps blood, has been shown to produce biologically powerful substances that probably ct as bormones.

The heart substances were discovered, identified and purified in recent months. Scientists involved in the research said they expect new and better treatments for high blood pressure and some heart and kidney conditions to result from further studies of the harmone-like

In experiments with animals, the heart substances powerfully stimulated the kidneys to excrete salt and water. In other laboratory experi-ments, such substances made blood vessels relax.

The researchers said the chemicals made in the heart probably act as bormones important to the func-tion of the kidneys and the circula-tory system. A hormone is a sub-stance produced by one organ to circulate through the body and af-feer distant tissues. Because the heart substances have not yet been found in the blood, the scientists said it was still premature to call them hormones.

Nevertheless, the findings add a new aspect to endocrinology, the new aspect to endocamoning, the study of chemicals with hormone-like characteristics. Brain chemi-cals have been discovered in this category and, more recently, at least a dozen such substances, once thought unique to the brain, have been found in the intestine. Other tissues not expected to contain hormones have also been found to have hormone-like substances.

Scientists have cloned the gene responsible for making the heart chemicals, according to a report last week in the journal Nature by scientists of Cornell University Medical College and a company on the West Coast, California Biotechcology Inc.

Reproducing the gene in the lab-oratory should make possible large-scale production of the heart substances and further analysis of their functions in the body.

The research tram has named one such compound "auriculin" signifying that it comes from the upper chambers of the heart, or auricles.

Dr. John H. Laragh, a Cornell researcher, said: "This compound is at least as powerful as the most owerful diametics that we know of." The difference is that other directics, which help the body rid cause of disagreements over the naticel of excess fluid, are not protuced within the body, while the bormone-like substances discovine said divisions and schiams that ered recently are produced by the subsequently arose between us,"

Even the consular agreement has its opponents within the administration, a top Reagan official said last week, such as the U.S. agencies that would have to deal "with the spics attached to the new office."

There have been hints that now the Kremlin would rather put the new consulate in Boston, since there already is a United Nations diplomatic mission in New York.

On defense issues, such as antisatellite weapons, space defense against ballistic missiles and underground testing of ouclear weapons, the Kremlin sometimes presents a confusing picture. Market Suffers as Hopes Fade for Drop in U.S. Rates

By CARL GEWIRTZ

ARIS — Capital markets took a beating last week as the euphoria that had been building up for an ineluctable reduction in U.S. interest rates gave way to the reality that rates are headed higher.

The killing blow to the optimists was the midweek news that the U.S. gross national product expanded at an annual rate of 5.7 percent in the second quarter, much faster than the 4 percent or less that had been widely forecast. The still torrid rate of expansion dashed expectations that the Federal Reserve would allow interest rates to decline.

In fact, short-term rates increased about half a percentage point last week and the traditional end-of-quarter bookkeeping pressures on borrowing costs

As a risult, the new issues offered last week - most of which were swaps into floating rate dollars - fared badly.

An exception was the repackaging by Merrill Lynch of the $500 milion of floating-rate notes issued by Sweden last March.

The original floater, which was managed by Merrill, did not sell well because it ran for 40 years and offered a thin 1/2-point margin over the London interbank offered rate. Rumor had it that Merrill Lynch was stuck with the bulk of the notes. - Howmuch actually remained in Merrill's hands will never be publicly known, but it obviously was enough for the firm to concoct a formula to make the notes saleable. The complicated operation in effect raises the yield on the notes to % of a point over Lbor. Anyone holding the paper to maturity — at which time there will now be a bonus payment — will have earned just under a point over Libor, or more exactly 42.5 basis points over

To accomplish this, a trust fund, the Swedish 40-Year-Note Trust, vas created. Merrill will put into it as much as $10 million of the original floating-rate notes. The trust will earn an income of % point over Libor, which will be paid to Merrill for a swap into 12%-percent, semiannual, fixed-rate funds. The proceeds of "the swip, distributed to holders of the remaining $490 million, adds 4 point to the yield of the Swedish FRN.

These income certificates are now being offered to all holders A of he original Swedish notes and the two items will trade as one searcity. The FRNs will continue to earn 1/2 point over Libor and th: 14 percent earned on the income notes means that holders will be paid % point over Libor.
Current holders of the notes, d

Current holders of the notes, denominated in units of $10,000, can exchange each security for the new package at a cost of $200.

As the original notes traded at a discount of 98 from the beginning, the additional $200 in effect brings the purchase price back to par. New investors will pay $10,000 for one note and income certificate.

Merrill had tried, mostly unsuccessfully, to sell the original notes at a discount of 98—offering to give up the bulk of its 2%-percent commission. By now selling the package at par, Merrill

New AT&T Computer Resembles IBM's

Some Analysts Are Disappointed By Seeming Lack of Innovation

By David E. Sanger New York Times Service

NEW YORK - When American Telephone & Telegraph Co. introduces its entry in the personal computer market Tuesday, its biggest task may be to satisfy skeptics that it has not waded into battle with IBM with the wrong machine at the wrong time.

For the past week, pictures and detailed specifications of AT&T's newest computer, made for the telephone giant by Olivetti, have circulated throughout the industry. While dealers, analysts and some big potential customers, some of whom have seen the machine, say they would hardly dismiss anything bearing the AT&T label, most say they are disappointed that AT&T did not make a bold stroke, a major technological advance that would set its products apart from those offered by International Business

"Their big shot at making it, we thought, was coming out with a machine that was different, a major step forward," David Cook, chief financial officer of United Personal Computer Corp., said.

He said he may not carry AT&T's entry in his 10 Computerland franchises in Connecticut and Massachusetts. He and others note that AT&T's machine is another slick-look-ing IBM-compatible computer, although significantly faster and a little more flexible. "Lord knows there are enough me-too products out there," Mr. Cook said.

Moreover, other dealers and analysts say, AT&T is coming to market just as demand for top-of-the-line personal computers appears to have slackened, and dealers' shelves are overflowing.

"We've entered a time of consolidation in this industry," said David A. Norman, president of the nationwide Businessland chain While he would not comment on the AT&T product, be did say, "To break into this industry today, you really have to be bold and

A spokesman for the company responded:
"On Tuesday, I think you will see that we have something very impressive to offer." But he, like other AT&T executives, declined to elaborate or respond to specific criticisms until the computer is introduced.

To distinguish its computer, AT&T is expected to play to its biggest strength—telecommunications. The company will likely demonstrate a machine that can easily be booked up to a local area oetwork, which links computers, printers and other peripheral devices at high speed. That could prove a big selling point in the office market, where AT&T hopes to make its stand with its personal computer as well as the line of six larger computers, ranging in price from $10,000 to $340,000, that it started selling in late March selling in late March.

IBM still appears to be struggling with a high-speed network for its own computers, and the company said last month that it may still be two to three years away from marketing such a system.

Also, the early judgments on the new

AT&T machine may be overly harsh. At the core of the computer, for example, is the Intel 8086 microprocessor, which runs much faster than its cousin, the Intel 8088, used in the IBM machine. As a result, recalculating a financial spreadsheet, for example, could take half the time on the AT&T model, a saving of just a few seconds, but important to users who do a lot of "number crunching."

The computer also reportedly has improved graphics, and a special feature that enables it to draw on data from a bigger

AT&T system with a few keystrokes. Most analysts expect that the basic AT&T model, with two disk drives, will sell for slightly less than IBM's prices, which were recently reduced by as much as 23 percent. That means a basic AT&T model would sell' for about $2,600.

Despite the improvements, those familian with the machine say its overriding character-istic is its sameness with the IBM PC. Its keyboard is nearly identical. And like other IBM-compatibles, such as those recently in-(Continued on Page 13, Col. 6)

Roy E. Disney Rejoins Board Of Walt Disney

By Robert J. Cole New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Walt Disney Productions has announced that Roy E. Disney, a 54-year-old for-mer director, had rejoined the board and had been elected vice chairman of the big West Coast entertainment company. The news took Wall Street by surprise.

Roy E. Disney is the nephew of Walt Disney, who lounded the company with Disney's father, Roy O. Disney.

The announcement was made late Friday. Disney's stock rose $1. to $49.875, Friday on the New York Stock Exchange in heavy trading. Analysts, however, attrib-oted the rise to a California court order temporarily barring Saul P.

FOREIGN BODIES

By Barbara Grizziai Harrison, 348 PP. $16.95.

Doubleday. 245 Park Ave., New York, N.Y.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

WE know, from "Off Center," a collection of essays and interviews, that Barbara Grizzuti Harrison writes well. We know, from her pieces on Joan Didion and Jane Fonda in that book, that she is a harrowingly close observer. She's wise, in the way that only firsthand experience can make you wise. She sounds like someone who has suffered most of the entimisesms and delusions of contemporary big-city life.

The question in "Foreign Bodies," her first novel, is whether she doesn't know too much, whether she hasn't passed beyond — or feels she's passed beyond — the more or less ordinary concerns and emotions of which novels are made. She almost seems too sophisticated for the child's play demands of fiction, as if she can't believe in it herself, as if she can entertain the idea of a novel only hypothetically.

"Foreign Bodies" is about Angela, a tough-minded worldly woman in her 30s who falls hopelessly in love with an Indian homosexual named Devi. She wants more from him than he can give - sex - and he responds with 300 pages of ambivalence. Though their's a lot of wit and insight along the way, Devi's immovability gives the book a certain static, or cul-de sac, quality. Also, it's hard to see Angela's choice as something other than a neurotic evasion of the normal. And while neurotic evasions are legitimate subjects for now feels a certain attenuation of sympathy all the Devi is a fine portrait in his way. He's a sort of devil's advocate, as his name suggests, who presents the case against love. We've had all the books for love, Grizzati Haurison seems to be saying. Let's see what's wrong not with the lovers, but with love itself. Is it possible that we have outgrown it, that just when we need it most, we can't forgive its primitive inadequa-

Sthephan, another homosexual and a remote cousin of Angela's, is a likeable caricature. Always witty, self-possessed and self-parollying, he is like a Greek chorus chanting sensible admonitions at Angela. Devi imperils people and Sthephan rescues them. He is as gen as Devi is sellish. While Devi is a definition of narcissism, Sthephan resembles an institution. one of those vague philanthropies that have elegant offices on the Upper East Side.

Angela has a young daughter, Lary, who offers a tantalizing view of the next generation, a generation that will pass through, in its edolescence, what it has taken many of us a ifetime to experience and enderstand. The question is whether Lucy will not find adult life a series of deja-was. Yet, as far as the goes in "Foreign Bodies," Lucy has not lost her faith in things. She is not so much a distinsioned as a de-romanticized tera-ager. In an attempt to balance Angela's love for Devi. Grizzuti Harrison has given her a dying mother and father, and perhaps this is a mistake, for the writing here is sometimes scan-mental or histrionic. All the purple emotions Devi refuses are given, second-hand, to Ange-la's parents. There's an adolescent love for a teacher, too, that comes across as a dopped structural device to give Angela depth and a structural device to give Angela depth and a dark emotional history.

"You have too many words," Devi keeps telling Angela, and the reader may agree with him. Her passion for him degenerates into rhetoric. "Devi's beauty is like a character trait." "My eyes are blind, bloody with my heart's need." "I love and fear the dark." "Devi was the God-bearing person." "To love such a man in such a way is idolators. Idolaters are doomed; and in their doom lies the doom of the idol they worship."

Aphorisms are bad for novels. They stick in the reader's teeth. And we get tired of leasing Angela say "I love you" to Devi and to lacy. She's one of those women who, cynical about everything else, still thinks her own emotions irresistably interesting.

"You're an exhausting person to be with," a friend says to Angela. "Beware of people carrying ideas," Devi says. "Beware of ideas carrying leople." For all its rich texture, its exploration of the no-man's-land of love, "Foreign Bodies" is exhausting. In the last line of the book, the anthor says "In this story there are no villeins." There are no heroes or heroines no villains." There are no heroes or heroine either, nowhere for the reader to rest.

"Loving a man who is perverse." Angela says, "has this advantage: It means, if he re-turns your love, that he loves every side of you, even those you have disowned, those you disavow, those you are frightened of, those no one else has ever found and never loved, those no one else could possibly love. Grizznti Harrison asks a lot of the reader, but she gives generously too. While it might help, one doesn't have to be as "perverse" as Devi and Angela to appreciate "Foreign Bodies."

Bolivia Pulls Out of Summer Olympics

LA PAZ (Combined Dispatches) - Bolivia has said that it will not send a team to the Summer Olympics in Los Angeles to protect the country's dignity following what Bolivia called insulting articles in the U.S. press.

The government originally had decided that it could not afford to send a team but had changed its mind when the Bolivian Olympic Committee said there would be no cost to the state. The olympic committee on Wednesday recommended that a team should still go to Los Angeles but the government has overruled it Friday. The controversy centred on a Washington Post article, intended to be humorous, which poked fun at Bolivia's financial difficulties. A sports columnist for the paper. Tony Kornheiser, suggested "one of the sponsors of the Games, such as Budweiser could bring the Bolivian athletes and that they later pay their debt selling beer."

U.S. Judge Lifts Weightlifter's Suspension CHICAGO (Combined Dispatches) — A federal judge Friday lifted a twoyear suspension imposed by the International Weightlifting Federation on weightlifter Jeffrey Michels of the United States for allegedly using steroids.
The U.S. Weightlifting Federation then said Saturday in Weshington that it will recommend the inclusion of Jeff Michels on the 1984 Olympic Team.

tion by failing to give Michels a proper hearing. Shadur called the IWF's hearing in Italy May 20 "a shocking breach" of the federation rules. Michels, 22, was issued the suspension after winning all three top events in the Pan American weightlifting competition in Venezuela last August. Pre-performance testing indicated he had no disqualifying drugs in his system, but tests after the competition showed high testosterone levels.

Games to Add Women's 10,000 for Seoul LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The women's 10,000-meter run will be added to the 1988 Olympics in Seoul, Primo Nebiolo of Italy, president of the International Amateur Athletic Federation, the governing body of international track and field, said Saturday. field, said Saturday.

Women's groups in the United States fought to include the 10,000 and 5,000 in the 1984 Games, but lost that battle. Nebiolo said it was too late to add either event for this summer's Games, but vowed that the 10,000 meters run would be added in 1988. However, he added, the 5,000 meters will not be included in the '88 Games. Currently women compete in the Olympic 1,500 and 3,000 meters.

For the Record The New Zealand rugby union team beat France, 31-18, at Auckland, New Zealand, for France's second test defeat of its tour. New Zealand got tries from Bruce Smith. Azdy Dalton, and Warwick Taylor and Allan Hewson added five penalties and two conversions. Jean-Patrick Lescarboura had two tries and two penalty goals for France and Eric Bonneval added a try. Piquet Wins Grand Prix In Detroit

DETROIT - Nelson Piquet, the defending world champion and driving a BMW-powered Brabham, charged to his second straight Formula One victory, running away with Sunday's crash and attrition filled Detroit Grand Prix.

Just six of the 26 starters were running at the end of the grueling 64-lap race over the 2.5-mile (fourkilometer), 20-turn circuit winding through downtown Detroit.

Rookie Martin Brundle of England was a closing second in a Tyrrell, followed by Elio de Angelis of Italy in a Lotus, and Teo Fabi of Italy in the other Brabham.

The other other cars still running at the end were the McLaren of Alain Prost of France, the world championship point leader, and the Williams of Jacques Laffite of France, Both Prost and Laffite were a lap behind the winner.

Piquet, who won the Canadian Grand Prix on June 17 and started from the pole in both races, led every lap.

There were no injuries reported and officials immediately stopped the race. They said the first lap did not count and that the race would he restarted, with any of the drivers involved in the accident allow in start in available backup cars.

The incident occurred when Nigel Mansell of England, starting from the second row, tried to squeeze between Piquet and Prost as the 26-car field accelerated toward the first turn.

The three cars banged together and the right rear of Piquet's Brabham bounced into the air, the car slid to the right and pinned secondrow starter Michele Alboreto's Ferrari against the concrete wall.

There was a gap in the middle and I tried to jump between them," said Mansell. "All of a sudden, they both started to come together, I had nowhere in go. I took a bang in the front and a bang in the rear, but I guess my car is all right." Prost managed to drive his

McLaren through with no apparent damage, but several cars starting near the rear of the field then got

He said he much prefers the method of Bernard Hinault, four times a victor in the Tour de France and another favorite this year, to those of Eddy Merckx, who won five Tours while dominating cycling nearly a decade ago. Being at home is especially important to the Lemonds since the birth of their son, Geoffrey, in February. The family lives in a quiet street with a suburban air, renting a grey-back two-story house with a small lawn in front and a big backyard with a few Corsican pines. It shows Lemond, in a business suit and tie, surrounded by an Italian youngsters' cycling team, and is inscribed in gratitude and respect for his appearance.

Jostling With Elbows

By William Safire

N EW YORK — "No man lives without jostling and being joswrote Thomas Carlyle in 1838. "In all ways he has to elbow himself through the world, giving and receiving offense."

In the world of politics, elbows have become the single most important possession of a candidate. ton Post, "is a politician with d-

The metaphor of a person using his elbows to make room for himself is international: In 1980, a the preferred tense of restauran-Bonn politician was censured for charging that the politician Franz Josef Strauss was a man allied with usurers and wheeler dealers. and is a man with razor blades on

The not-so-funny bone has a revered place in slang: To bend the elbow is to take a drink, and an elbow is a cop, the name taken from the way some policemen elbow their way through a crowd for their prey. An elbow shaker was defined in Grose's Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue in 1785 as "a gamester, nne who rattles Sir Hugh's bones — i.e., the dice." That early slang compendium also defined elbow room as "sufficient space to act in"; out at elbows as "in declining circumstances," and elbow grease as "la-bor. Elbow grease will make an oak

A change of connotation is taking place in the political use of the word. Not long ago, to have sharp elbows was not considered a compliment, as was apparent in the calumniation of Strauss. Today, a politician without elbows is as lost as a politician without principles. The display of elbows is evidence

On occasion, the elbows still go a bit too far. In "Caveat," the mem-oirs of ouance-ridden Alexander Haig, he captions a picture of himself with hands on hips, elbows prominent: "The 'take-charge' image had taken hold. . . . My phoograph (jaw jutting, arms akimbo) had been on the cover of Time

Much ton macho. Akimbo comes from the Old Norse kengboginn, the shape of a bow when it has been bent back, and it is a position that bespeaks pride or hostility. In sum, a political figure today must have elbows, but they must not be too sharp, and he must not display them to photographers.

"What do they mean by 'interesting verbal specials"?" demands Alexander McKeveny of East Islip. New York. "Is salty language used to describe the soupe du jour? Perhaps a multilingual staff serves bons mots for dessert?"

A CLEVER and peroicious trick is being played by image makers, and the print media are being duped. The trick is the use of typography to make a name stand out and sell in editorial copy.

A Case for the Deputy Attorney General

By Leslie Maitland Werner New York Times Service

7 ASHINGTON - Carol E. W Diokios says she never thought of herself as a woman lawyer. She has always "proved" herself, she says, "as a lawyer, oot

But when she took the oath of office recently as deputy attor-ney general, an oath administered by Sandra Day O'Connor, the first woman to become a justice of the Supreme Court, there were nthers who were certainly aware that Dinkins was assuming the highest position ever held by a woman, or a woman lawyer, in Justice Department history. "It's special because no one has done it befure," Dinkins conceded. "It's oot special because of me. I just got out of law school at the right time, worked in a big firm at the right time and came to the department at the right time."

Others would disagree. Both Atturney General William French Smith and Dinkins's predecessor, Edward C. Schmults say she demonstrated special ability as a lawyer and a manager while serving as assistant attor-ney general in charge of the Lands and Natural Resources Division for the first two and a half years of the Reagan administration. "She did an outstanding job here." Smith said, adding that she had heen unaoimoosly aod speedily confirmed by the Senate for the position of deputy.

Schmults added: "Carol has demonstrated io very tough situa-tions that she's a terrific lawyer, a very fine manager, has an ex-traordinary ability to deal with people, has good judgment and can predict when problems are likely to develop."

Dinkins, a 38-year-old Texan who is a specialist in environmental law, left Washington last summer to return to private practice in Houston and to her husband and two daughters.

Several weeks ago, bowever, she was visiting Washington when the comination of Edwin Meese 3d, the presidential counselor, to replace Attoroey General Smith was blocked by an independent counsel's inquiry and Smith agreed to delay his return in private practice. Dinkins too?" " Dinkins said. At the time she said, "I've got to go now," but she returned. "I came back because Bill Smith asked me to. After all. he'd agreed to stay on when he'd planned to

She added, in her strong Texan drawl, that she certainly did oot "Potomac fever" because "the Mexican food here isn't good enough." But she said she regarded the department's number two position as a "neat opportunity" and "I didn't know when I would ever get a chance like this again.

The deputy attorney general, she said, should be "someone who has the skills of a lawyer whn can assemble and analyze the facts before making a decision." and not necessarily someone who can recite section 308 of some obscure statute and its legislative

Like Schmults, who left four months ago and was widely admired in Congress by both Democrats and Republicans, Dinkins is credited with a calm, pleasant personality well-suited to a top spot in a department often embroiled in conflict.

A Democratic aide to the Senate Judiciary Committee said its members had been impressed with her performance in confirmation hearings, but he concluded that there was probably "some symbolism" in the administra tion's appointment of a woman to the post in an election year.

Dinkins, a slim woman with short brown hair who dresses conservatively and wears little, if any, makeup, said she rejected the notion that a woman must develop a particular kind of per-sonal style to get ahead in what has been a predominantly male profession. You just have to be yourself. I don't know how you develop a style, you just are."

But there is a side of herself that she shields from public scrutiny, namely her private life with her two teen-aged daughters and her husband, O. Theodore Dinkins Ir., also a lawyer, who is in private practice and whom she married when she was in college.

Dinkins said that largely because she is a woman and wants to be treated as a professional, she saw no benefit in discussing her domestic life. She therefore declined to say whether it had been burdensome, in her last stay here, to commute to Texas for weekends with her family.

On the other hand, she did acknowledge that she "always wanted to be Mother Nature," that her "life ambition was to learn how to run a bulldozer" and that she liked to fish and mow the

She also said she decided to become a lawyer as a child, while observing her father, the only lawver in the small town of Mathis, Texas. "I saw that Daddy talked to a lot of people, had a lot of books and actually read them and also wrote things. I decided any job where you can talk to people, read and write was a job for me."

After earning a law degree at the University of Houston in 1971, she started work at the Texas Law Institute of Coastal and Marine Resources, realizing that environmental law was becoming a new and growing field.

She added that while in the Lands Division at the Justice Department, she testified in favor of strengthening the sanctions for environmental crimes.

In 1973 Dinkins joined the law firm of Vinson & Elkins, and she became its first female partner in 1980. She also headed a study of coastal management for Willia Clements when he was governor of Texas.

It was Clements who made contact with the Reagan transition team in 1980 and suggested Dinkins for a federal position. When offered a spot at the Justice Department, she seized the chance. "I felt there had to be people in government who'd seen things from the other side. I also felt that there was something I could do to help the president."

ITALY POSTCARD

An American Dream

By Henry Kamm New York Tunes Service

ARMAIONE, Italy - If the Beverly Hills Architectural Review Board in California had not intervened, a super-life-size bronze equestrian statue of John Wayne costumed as a cowboy that is soon to rise on Wilshire Boulevard would be perpetually turning on its pedestal and be painted in living cotor.

Harry Jackson, a former New York Abstract Expressionist painter of promise who has lived and worked in this Tuscan town since 1958 and who has made cowboy and Indian bronzes his nearly exclusive and lucrative artistic theme, feels the "pea brains" of the board, very perverse little people who have power they haven't earned." failed to understand that the revolving Wayne represented the continuity of life, its never-ending circle. He conceded that even the bank that commissioned the work and the late actor's daughters were "not overly happy" with the painting. Jackson has made a specialty of painting his bronzes, a custom that vanished in the Renaissance.

The board also made the sculptor remove one of the four marble steps leading to the 21-foot monu-ment consisting of the statue and ment consisting of the statue and reliefs of a stampede and the burial of its cowboy victim. Otherwise, the board ruled, the statue would be too tall and would be considered an advertisement for the Great Western Financial Corp., rather than a work of art.

The authorities ordered an 18inch-high flowered hedge to be planted around the work, "to keep vandals off," the 60-year-old Jack-son said scornfully. "As I designed it, it has such a simple dignity to it that they wouldn't touch it," he added. To have it revolve to me is part of the artistic concept. The whole thing is a tremendous in-fringement of artistic freedom." Nonetheless, the monument, already stripped of its paint, is now aboard a freighter, on which Jackson hopes it is traveling as John Wayne should - upright, mounted on the open deck, through the Panama Canal en route to Los Angeles for its unveiling on the bank's plaza
